

MYTH

You always need permission to use copyright works.

REALITY

Permission is not required if the work is out of copyright, is under a Creative Commons licence or if you are using the work for reasons permitted under the fair dealing exceptions such as criticism and review, news reporting, education and private study.